Literary Notes.

In our country Doctor Washington Glad-den stands abreast of such men in England as Canon Fremantle and Dean Stubbs, With them, is helds that the Christian purpose is social as well as an individual regeneration; that the state is as truly divine as the church, and has a more comprehensive scope. In his new book, "Social Salvation" (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.), he considers the relation of the church and the pulpit to social questions of the day, study-ing particularly the care of the poor; the relation of the state to the unemployed; the questions of prison reform and of the treatment of the criminal classes; the so-cial vices; public education in its various phases; and the government of cities. Docfor Gladden has done such effective work for municipal reforms in his own community that what he writes comes with excep-tional weight and from first-hand knowledge.

"The Roll-Call of Westminster Abbey by Mrs. A Murray Smith, daughter of the Dean of Westminster, contains a mass of careful and accurate information which will compliment Dean Stanley's wellknown monograph, filling it out in many ways. It is not concerned with the history or architecture of the building, but deals only, as its well-chosen title implies, with the population of the dead within its walls. We Americans are perhaps more interested in the Abbey and in Stratford-on Avon than in any other places in England, and are likely to find in this volume more facts about the occupants of the various tombs than can be found in any other one book.
